WILL ISSUE

Clearing House Certificates in Lieu of Cash to Banks

THIS IS MORGAN'S ADVICE

Only Four Times Before Has Such a Drastic Measure Been Adopted

Situation is Now Considered to be Under Control--Stock Market in Calmer State.

New York, Oct. 26—If the Clearing House Association acts on J. P. Morgan's advice it will resort to the issuance of clearing house certificates to check drains on New York banks.

The clearing house committee is in session now, footing up the amounts withdrawn from New York institutions through shipments to the interior or by local depositors who prefer hoarding their money until the present period of stringency is past.

Should the total seem great enough to warrant a resort to the expedient suggested by Mr. Morgan, a meeting of the full association will be called immediately to authorize the issuance of certificates.

The certificates are really loans, amply secured and guaranteed by the banks accepting them. During occasions of stringency they are issued, and taken up after a return of the money market to normal conditions.

The adoption of such a measure does not imply that the banks are in distress, but that more currency is needed than is immediately available. It is an effective precaution against the exhaustion of cash supplies in the financial institutions.

Upon four occasions since the Civil war a similar course has been followed—September 22, 1873; May 15, 1884; November 12, 1890, and June 21, 1893.

Depositors again gathered at the opening hour today at the doors of several of the banks and trust companies from which there have been heavy withdrawals. The numbers were somewhat lessened, but to be sure that they were in time, a number of persons arrived long before dawn, and a few were on hand before midnight. Among those in the waiting lines there was so much suffering that the police on duty in two places resorted to a system of numbering, each depositor bearing on his hat a slip of paper indicating the place in the procession to which he was entitled. By this means they were enabled to leave their posts occasionally for rest and refreshment.

NAVY'S NEEDS COME BEFORE THE CABINET

SECRETARY BONAPARTE SAYS THERE SHOULD BE MORE BLUE JACKETS.

WANTS $5,000,000 INCREASE

And Recommends the Construction of Two New Monitor Battleships. Other Matters.

Washington, Oct. 26—At the session of the cabinet naval matters were under consideration. Secretary McMillan has just completed estimates for the maintenance of the naval establishment, and as these show a great increase, the president and the secretary of the navy are giving earnest attention to them. The secretary advanced a proposition to increase by $5,000,000 the standing appropriation for the payment of enlisted men in the navy. According to his estimate this increase would admit of about 3000 more blue jackets. The proposition will be included in the estimates to be submitted to the next session of congress. Secretary McMillan also has the report of the naval general board, headed by Admiral Dewey, upon the new construction required to meet the plans of the board and these were touched upon. It is pointed out that because he last year expressed the opinion that no new ship would be authorized at the congress, the president has somewhat embarrassed himself, but as several of the battleships which were last supposed to be perfectly serviceable have since rather unexpectedly been shown of obsolete type, it is not a very difficult problem to explain to congress the necessity for amending the original estimate. It is now generally believed that two and probably three battleships will be recommended. Another matter recommended by the commission on the location of the navy yard at the entrance to the Panama canal, whose views Secretary McMillan held out in the cabinet, is to meet the need of the navy for a new base of operations. The next base would be at the entrance to the Panama canal, and the location would be decided upon in a few days. The president is expected to wait a detailed report on the subject.

A PLOT

To Assassinate King Edward Has Been Frustrated

MAN ARRESTED BY POLICE

said He Was Stationed at a Certain Spot to Shoot a Certain Man

Who Came That Way to Shoot Game --He is Supposed to Have Accomplices in the Plot.

London, Oct. 26—A supposed plot to assassinate King Edward of England, was uncovered through the arrest today of a man who gives his name as John Pearce, for loitering near Sir Ernest Cassel's Chippenham park residence, where the king has been shooting for the past week. "I was sent out to shoot a gentleman who comes here to kill game," said the prisoner when arrested, "and I'm going to shoot him, too."

The man was remanded to Newmarket jail. An attempt is being made to induce him to reveal the details of the plot and to give the names of his accomplices. The Prince of Wales, who also shoots over the Chippenham park preserves, was to have arrived shortly to spend next week.

The police connect today's arrest with an incident last Saturday when the detectives who accompanied his majesty stopped a closed carriage which was endeavoring to approach the monarch while shooting near Monkhon paddocks. The king was crossing a roadway leading to the main road at the time. The carriage had been moving aimlessly up and down the public road for some time before his majesty appeared, but as soon as he stepped into view suddenly swung toward the entrance to the private road and started toward him.

A large number of Halloween parties and celebrations are announced by the society folk of Newark to take place on Thursday evening, October 31. When asked why this day was celebrated, several could give no answer as to the origin of the festival. It follows:

"Halloween has been the great harvest festival almost ever since the first garden was planted. It was one of the three festivals celebrated by the Druids—May 1, the planting; June 21, the ripening, and, greatest of all, October 31, the harvesting. In the days of pagan Rome, October 31 was the Feast of Pomona, to the angel who guards the gardens, and it was but natural that God's harvesting should come to be observed at this time also, and this day devoted to the remembrance of the dear souls that God's hand 'gathered in.'"

"Also on this day the Druids had renewed the sacred fires for the long winter to come. Then, as fire is the prevention of two great evils, cold and hunger, it came in time to be thought of as preventing other evils also—the evils that lived in the air and sky—pixies and fairies, ghouls, ghosts and goblins, so that even as late as the seventeenth century, farmers made the rounds of their farms, swinging fiery torches and singing solemn doggerel to prevent the uncanny ones from casting a spell upon the crops.

"Therefore, when people today bring out the homely fruits of the harvesting, the nuts and the apples and pumpkins, march about with Jack-o'-Lanterns, lit by the fire turning apples on a spit, to weird thymes, and roast nuts in pairs while listening to ghostly tales, they are uniting the traditions of at least three religions and doing that in fun which was once most solemn ceremony."

Oct. 26 In History.

1793—George James Danton, the famous French revolutionary, was born at Arcis-sur-Aube; guillotined at Paris, April 5, 1794. While minister of justice Danton announced that in order to stop the progress of the Prussian army of invasion "we must strike the royalists with terror." Acting upon the suggestion, the mob broke into the prisons and engaged in dreadful massacres. It was Danton who said, speaking of the captive king: "We have no right to be his judges. It is true. Well, we will kill him."

1871—Major General Robert Anderson, hero of Fort Sumter, died at Nice, Italy; born 1836.

1890—John Codman Ropes, military student and historian, died in Boston; born 1838.

1900—The strike of the anthracite coal miners ended in a victory for the strikers.

1903—Elizabeth Cady Stanton, woman suffragist, reformer and philosopher, died in New York city; born 1815.

THE TAXPAYER FOOTS THE BILLS.

The American Tribune states that the changing of the pumping station was an absolute necessity. The change was no more of an absolute necessity than would be the changing of the Trust building from Third to Fourth street.

The board of service gained nothing by the change. Instead they saddled an additional cost onto the taxpayer of over $25,000. They will have increased the operating expenses of the new plant by at least $1,200 per year.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has surpassed all other medicines, in merit, sales and cures.

Its success, great as it has been, has apparently only just begun.

It has received by actual count more than 30,000 testimonials in two years.

It purifies the blood, cures all blood diseases, all humors and all eruptions.

It strengthens the stomach, creates an appetite and builds up the whole system.

It cures that tired feeling and makes the weak strong.

In usual liquid form or in chocolate tablets known as Sarsatabs. 50 doses $1.

200 per year. And they would try and make you believe, dear voter, that it was an absolute necessity.

The taxpayers are becoming awakened. They know why the change was made. The reason has been fully explained.

They have made it! Over $25,000 worth of showing. And you, Mr. Taxpayer, will have to foot the bills.

Anthony R. Pitzer, Charles D. Nutter and Sidney B. Levingston are well known to the citizens of Newark. They would make an ideal service board. All three are men of good, sound business judgment. The former by reason of his service in the auditor's office, and his twelve years experience as a surveyor would make a valuable member of the board.

Charles D. Nutter is a practical plumber. He has served four years in the council, and three as street commissioner. He is eminently qualified in every respect and should be elected, would discharge the duties of the office in a manner pleasing to his constituents.

Sidney Levingston served the people of Newark well and faithfully while on the board. By reason of his previous experience he is amply qualified in every manner for the office to which he aspires.

You can make no mistake by electing these gentlemen as members of the board of public service. They promise to discharge the duties of the office in a fearless, faithful and honest manner. All are peculiarly adapted for the various duties required of a board member, and the voters will take this fact into consideration when it comes to depositing the ballots on Tuesday, November 5.

No chance after tonight; Register. One of the most important offices of the city government is that of city solicitor. It is very essential that the head of the legal department be a first-class lawyer. The Democrats met this requirement when they nominated Frank A. Bolton for a second term. He has been tried and has not been found wanting. His nomination meets the approval of the Democrats and many Republicans recognizing his qualifications for the place will vote for him.

Register tonight; last chance. Harry Roesel, the Democratic nominee for president of the council, needs no introduction to the people of Newark. He is one of the best known and most popular men of the city. By reason of his integrity and wide business experience he is the logical man to elect to the position for which he was nominated for a second term. With Harry Roesel as president of the council all classes feel assured that their interests will be carefully protected as they have in the past.

Register before 9 o'clock. The baseball season of 1907 has ended, but the "fans" are wondering what Edwin S. Randolph, as mayor, would do next season. Would he stop Sunday baseball? Mr. Randolph himself will not say. He dodges the issue by alleging that the ball park is beyond his jurisdiction.

Newark will not be a "wide open" town under Herbert Atherton's administration. Mr. Atherton has announced a platform that plainly declares his position on all matters of public interest and he is heartily in favor of the maintenance of order, suppression of gambling, and enforcement of the midnight closing ordinance.

Is Mr. Randolph for or against Sunday baseball? His silence on the subject is so complete one can almost hear a pin drop.

J. S. Kuster, Jr., Henry Baker and L. A. Stare are all men of recognized ability, and will fill the positions of councilmen-at-large to the full satisfaction of the people of Newark. They are popular men whose whole lives have been spent in Newark and they can be depended on to promote the city's best interests in the discharge of their duties.

For ward councilmen are present to the voters. Oliver D. Irwin, from the First Ward; W. D. Fulton, from the Second Ward, and Elmer Orr, from the Third Ward. All are well known and estimable citizens of Newark, and if elected will reflect credit on the city.

"AS TO THAT SHOWIN!"

Juggling of Figures Will Avail Nothing As The Fact Remains That Thousands of Dollars Were Uselessly Expended

Do the Voters Desire a Continuation of This Policy or Do They Wish a Safe, Business Administration of City Affairs?

"Let us look at this matter with the eye of justice, fairness and truth, and see what it contains.

"In the first place, these men 'have made good' their pre-election promises. They have saved the city money in their management of the construction of the waterworks plant. Their record shows up remarkably well.

"One of the first and most important changes they made, and one which was for the best interests of the city, was to purchase a new site for the pumping station, as a visit to both the old and new site will show.

"The old site, which had been selected by the old board, is in a swampy ground in which, dry as the weather has been for some time past, stands water to the depth of a foot or two, while in the abandoned concrete portion of the proposed pumping house the water stands from 8 to 14 feet deep, covering by probably a foot the foundations on which the engines were to stand, while the high watermarks on the wall show that it has been at least a foot higher."—American Tribune.

Again, let us take the Tribune's advice "and look at this matter with the eye of justice, fairness and truth."

True, a part of the old site was in a swampy condition, but how long would it have taken to overcome that trouble? A few rods of tile, a little work and the trouble would have been obliterated. It would have been easily remedied for there is quite a fall to the creek a short distance away.

"And water stands in the abandoned concrete portion of the proposed pumping house!"

How terrible! Water standing on a solid concrete foundation which has been exposed to the elements for two years!

Such rantings, dear Tribune, will not deceive the voter. The fact remains the Republican board, the present one, if you please, removed the site and for no logical reason whatever except that they had promised to do something and they have done it. But at what a cost to the taxpayer? Over $25,000 of the people's money spent by reason of the proposed change. An what have they gained? What have they accomplished by the change? The site which the present board selected is no better than the old one. In fact, there is more water to contend with than at the old site. It is a half mile further away from the city and will cost at least $1,200 per year more to operate.

Besides there was that personal interest in the transaction by a member of the board that cannot be denied.

And Mr. Taxpayer, what have they to show for your money? A lot of dry pipe, partly under ground, and a smokestack that will stand as a monument of stupidity on the part of public officials who seemingly cared not for their city's welfare, but only desired to gratify their own selfish ends.

Nearly, if not all, of the $300,000 practically expended! A few miles of dry iron pipe and a smokestack!

Nice condition of affairs, isn't it?

Now as to the figures compiled by the Tribune. They would have you believe that the board is saving the taxpayers $12,997.41 by reason of the change.

How in the name of common sense can they save anything on a station that is half mile further from the city requiring the expenditure of nearly $6,000 for laying and purchasing additional pipe and an additional expenditure of $2,250 for real estate? And yet they would have you believe that they are saving money by reason of the change.

Any well informed man knows, or at least should know, that the changing of sites after thousands of dollars had been spent on the first one, will, and has cost the taxpayers of this city something over $25,000.

Do you wish a continuation of this policy?

We do not think so. Then go to the polls on Tuesday, November 5, and vote for a good, safe, sound, sane and business administration of the city's affairs, instead of the board now mismanaging those affairs.

You'll lose your vote if you are not registered. Do it tonight.

Catarrh Fifteen Years.

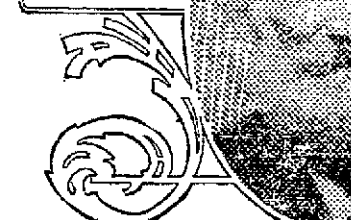

Mrs. S. A. Rogers, LeMoore, Cal., writes: "I had chronic catarrh of fifteen years standing, and death seemed to stare me in the face. I tried several so-called catarrh remedies, and without avail. I took fifteen bottles of Peruna and five bottles of Manalin, and I am completely cured. All the catarrhal symptoms are gone, my digestion is good, my appetite is good, and I rest well at night. I am seventy years of age and I hope to live many more years to praise Peruna to all my friends who suffer from catarrh as I did."

Rheumatism of Old Age.

Mrs. Caroline Trunk, 1705 Jefferson Ave., Peoria, Ill., writes: "I had a very painful trouble for six years, consisting of rheumatism in the back and in the thigh. I used a great deal of medicine, but it did not help me. Then I used Dr. Hartman's Peruna, and two bottles of this entirely freed me of the rheumatism. I wish to keep both Peruna and Manalin always in the house. This is the best medicine that I can recommend any one to take for rheumatism."

Catarrh All Through My System.

Mr. Robert Metters, Murdock, Cass Co., Neb., Box 45, writes: "I commenced to take Peruna the first of last February. I took it as nearly as possible according to directions. I also got a Peruna almanac and for the first time learned that my trouble was systemic catarrh. I had catarrh from my head all through my system. I took Peruna until I was entirely cured."

Cough and Indigestion.

Thos. Beckwith, 11 Kitchell St., Auburn, N. Y., writes:

"I was troubled with a cough and indigestion. Thanks to your advice and Peruna I am in good health now. I was talking with an old friend last week. He told me he took Peruna last winter, and he is in the best of health, working every day and speaks highly of your medicine. I shall feel it my duty to recommend Peruna to all my friends."

A great many testimonials from people of high rank and people in the ordinary walks of life, are received every month. Catarrh in all its phases, catarrh of the different organs of the body; acute catarrh, chronic catarrh, catarrh that has baffled other remedies—all these are giving to Peruna unqualified and unsolicited endorsement.

"I believe Peruna is the best medicine in the world for all catarrhal diseases."—Mr. J. W. Palmer, 1116 Tower Ave., San Francisco, Wis.

SECRET SOCIETIES

Odd Fellows.

Much interest is felt among the local members of the several lodges of Odd Fellows in Newark in the dedication of the new extension which have been added to the Odd Fellows' Home at Springfield. The dedicatory exercises will be held at the Clark county capital on Thursday of next week, and it is expected that several hundred Newark Odd Fellows will attend the exercises. Arrangements have been perfected for a grand parade, which will start promptly at one o'clock and in which all lodges have been invited to join. At the conclusion of the parade and at about the hour of 2 o'clock a program, consisting of music and addresses will take place at the building. It is anticipated that there will be 10,000 Odd Fellows present the day of the dedication. The Grand Lodge of Ohio of the I. O. O. F. has as its board of trustees, Fred Wunderlich of Dayton, J. W. Root of Garrettsville, C. D. Verge of Cincinnati, L. E. Dodd of Zanesville, and Emmet Kite of Urbana. These gentlemen are also trustees for the Odd Fellows' Home.

Newark Lodge No. 623 I. O. O. F. met in regular session last Monday night and conferred the second degree on a class of candidates, in a happy and pleasing manner. We had a large attendance of our own members, as well as many visiting members. The success of all secret societies is a good degree team, of which we have in every degree.

Brother E. E. Moore is our drill master of which we are very proud. He makes each member of the team know his place.

Net Monday night we will confer the third degree on a number of candidates. At the close we will serve refreshments. All Odd Fellows are invited to come and enjoy the evening.

Red Men.

When the council fire was kindled last night many chiefs were present. Great interest is being shown here lately and many palefaces have sought admission. Several more applications were received last night and referred to the reservation committees. Sixteen palefaces will learn the mysteries of Redman-hip on next Friday's sleep. The team is in good shape and the warriors and braves are anxious. The Great Sachem of Ohio will be present and a good supper will be served.

Hay Makers.

The Hay-Makers met last night and settled the affairs pertaining to the hay make last Wednesday night. The meeting on that date was the most successful ever held, 420 members being present. Ten tramps from Newark, one from St. Louis and one from Bridgeport, N. J., were taught how to make hay. Some hay yet remains and will be cut the second week in December. Aunt Sarah served a fine spread for the harvest hands and the candidates all got their money's worth.

Knights of Pythias.

The Esquire and Knight rank were conferred upon Gideon Rowe and the Knight rank upon J. B. Dewolf at White Cross lodge on last Thursday night. Fully 150 Knights were present to witness the work, and was no doubt one of the best meetings ever held in the history of White Cross. A fine banquet was greatly enjoyed by all. Four new petitions were received. The Page and Esquire ranks will be conferred tonight at which time we will have word that Will H. Manner of Coshocton and trustee of the Pythian Home at Springfield and one of the prominent Pythians of Ohio will be present. Let there be a full attendance.

Camels.

The members of Monarch Temple No. 66 enjoyed themselves in a very amusing and interesting session at the hall Wednesday evening. A number of important subjects were discussed and a few carried over for the next session. The temple closed in regular order.

It is the desire to have every member of the temple present at the next meeting in K. of P. hall, Ankele block on October 20. Temple opens at 7:30 p. m. A short session will be on, after which a card social and a cigar on the side will be the program for the evening.

Modern Woodmen.

At the regular meeting of Cedar Camp, No. 4727, Modern Woodmen of America, held on Monday night, there was a good attendance of the members and all officers were present. Seven applications for membership were received and balloted upon and elected. The Escort found in waiting W. W. Plewes, F. B. Burk, W. B. Bark, Frank Grindle and E. C. Kennedy, who were adopted as beneficial members, and W. F. Holton who was adopted as a social member.

An appeal for aid was read from Coshocton Camp No. 7835, of Coshocton, Ohio, who has a neighbor who is in needy circumstances, stricken with tuberculosis and not able to work, and the camp voted to send the usual amount that it sends to all appeals for aid.

A letter was read stating that on January 5, 1908 would be the 25th anniversary of the Modern Woodmen of America and that it was proposed to celebrate the anniversary by the largest class adoption ever held by any society. It is proposed to hold a class adoption in each county all over the jurisdiction and the consul and clerk have been selected as chairman and secretary of the county celebration committee.

Now, neighbors, as Cedar Camp is the largest camp in the state of Ohio, the other camps over the state look to us to do great things and every neighbor is earnestly requested to begin at once and secure at least one candidate for this county class adoption. Our head consul, A. R. Talbot, has undertaken to issue 150,000 new certificates during the year 1907 and has already issued over 100,000.

On Thursday evening, October 31, the team of Cedar Camp will give the first of the series of monthly dances and by the call for invitations there will be a big crowd.

Masonic.

One of the best attended meetings of Acme lodge, No. 554, that has been held for some time, was that of Thursday night of this week. There was not only a large attendance of the local members, but there were many visitors from Zanesville and lodges in the county. Among others the degree was conferred on W. C. Bolin and five of the leading participants, in the degree were relatives of Mr. Bolin. His father took the Master's station, while three uncles and a cousin filled the other positions. Probably nothing like it had ever before been witnessed in Masonic circles in this city.

GAVE GOLD PIECE AS SECURITY FOR A LOAN OF $9

Queer things happen frequently in banking circles, but because of the conservative policy practiced by most bankers these unusual incidents seldom get into the newspapers. However, it is probably not transcending any banking ethics to tell the story of how a woman borrower put up the best security possible for a nine dollar loan at a nearby bank.

This woman had been a small customer, but had run out of funds. Several days ago she appeared at the cashier's window.

"I would like to borrow nine dollars," she said. "I need it and thought maybe you would let me have it for a few days when I'll pay you back."

The woman was politely informed that the bank never loaned money without sufficient security, that, if the officials began such a policy, it would not be long until the bank would fail. The cashier was expressing his regret because of his inability to accommodate her, when the woman spoke up:

"I've got a twenty-dollar gold piece and I don't want to spend it. Will you take that as security, and lend me nine dollars until I can pay you back?"

There was the faintest outline of a smile lingering about the cashier's face as he let the woman have the money. The smile broke into a laugh when the borrower closed the door of the bank behind her and hurried down the street, supremely ignorant of the unusual transaction she had just negotiated.

ALL WRONG

The Mistake is Made by Many Newark Citizens.

Don't mistake the cause of back ache.

To be cured you must know the cause.

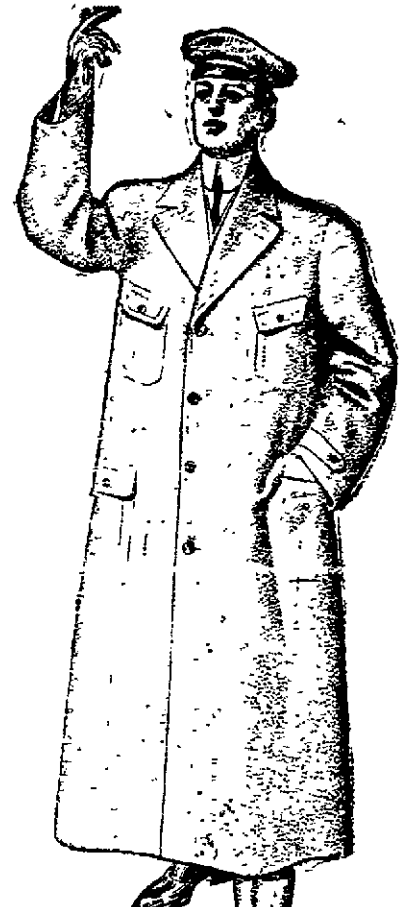

It is wrong to imagine relief is cure.

Backache is kidney ache. You must cure the kidneys.

A Newark resident tells you how this can be done. Wesley Rowland, express driver, living on Washington St., near Mill St., East Newark, O., says: "Many a time my back pained me so and was so weak that I could not load my wagon. If I stopped to pick up anything it was all I could do to straighten up. My back pained me so at night that I could not sleep. I would wake up again with terrible pain through the back and shoulders as if I were in a cramp. I tried liniments and various remedies but found nothing that helped me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Cravon's drug store. Three boxes were all that were required to cure me and the cure has been permanent. That was two years ago and I have had no trouble of the kind since."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's and take no other. 32

AT

Newark's Biggest Furniture Store

HERE IS THE STORY of 10 cents a day. It's a mighty interesting story, too. Read it all—we'll make it brief. We have been doing business in Newark for years. Our success has been magnificent—due to our immense stock, courteous treatment, sterling values and reasonable prices, always. If you spend a cent for FURNITURE, CARPETS, STOVES or any HOUSEFURNISHINGS before looking at our stock, you'll make a mistake, and the more you spend the bigger your mistake will be. Why? Because we operate 22 stores and buy in tremendous quantities. That means very low prices to us. This immense saving in buying is taken from our retail prices, for your benefit. But low prices are not the only inducement. Quality is just as important as price—poorly made furniture is dear at any price. Furniture must be well made to find a place in this store, where high quality and low prices meet.

A WORD ABOUT CREDIT—There never was a time in the history of the country when a reputation for honesty and integrity counted for so much as at present. The man of such a reputation finds himself with ample capital at his command when trading at PARISH'S.

For 10c a Day we will sell and deliver to your home any article in the store

There are no strings tied to this proposition. All we ask is a very small payment down, the balance 10c a day. Get what you want on these remarkable terms. You won't miss the money.

IS WORTH SAYING

Put it in Some Safe Place for it May Come in Handy Some Day.

Here is a simple home-made mixture as given by an eminent authority on Kidney diseases, who makes the statement that it will relieve almost any case of Kidney trouble if taken before the stage of Bright's disease. He states that such symptoms as lame back, pain in the side, frequent desire to urinate, especially at night; painful and discolored urination, are readily overcome. Here is the recipe, try it:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sassaaparilla, three ounces. Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime. A well known local druggist is authority that these ingredients are all harmless and easily mixed at home by shaking well in a bottle. This mixture has a peculiar healing and soothing effect upon the entire kidney and urinary structure, and often overcome the worst forms of Rheumatism in just a little while. This mixture is said to remove all blood disorders and cure the Rheumatism by forcing the kidneys to filter and strain from the blood and system all uric acid and fowl, decomposed waste matter, which cause these afflictions. Try it if you aren't well. Save the prescription.

Mother's Friend

DEAF 20 YEARS NOW HEARS

Another Old Citizen of the County Tells What Vital Magnetism Did For Him.

After Being Treated by the Boy Phenomenon, Who Rolled Away the Stone From the Tomb of 20 Years Silence.

Unable to Treat All Who Called Last Week, the Reduced Prices Have Been Continued One More Week.

The phenomenal cures accomplished by the Boy Phenomenon who has an overabundance of vital fluid, continues to attract crowds of our best citizens to his office at the Warden hotel, and to excite the greatest interest all over the city. While some of the cures seem too wonderful to believe, the most conservative versions stop very little short of the miraculous.

What lends an air of truthfulness to the report of these cures and which makes them facts which cannot be denied, is the fact that the names and addresses of persons cured have been among the oldest and best citizens of Newark, whose veracity could not be doubted.

Another transformation from being so deaf that people had to shout in his ears to make him hear and now being able to hear an ordinary conversation is that of Mr. Robert H. Downey, residing on the Granville road, who, as nearly everyone knew, has been very deaf for the past 20 years.

He received his first treatment nearly three weeks ago, and the next morning was astonished to hear his clock tick, and then heard people talk to him, and before the week was out could readily hear an ordinary conversation. He has had two treatments since then, and for the first time can now hear when spoken to in an ordinary tone.

When such men, who have won the respect and confidence of the community, come forward in the public press and says the Boy Phenomenon cured him, it must be believed. You cannot doubt such testimony, especially as the living evidence is on the streets and before your eyes every day. He says:

"There is so much suffering in this world, and so many deaf people who have been imposed upon, that I believe where a method is found that will alleviate such conditions, it should be made widely known. Therefore, when I took treatment I made up my mind if I was not cured to let the public know it. It is with feelings of gratitude and a desire to let others know the true facts, that I made a public statement.

"I was one of the many skeptics who went to the Auditorium two weeks ago to see the Boy Phenomenon treat the afflicted. I have been deaf over 20 years, so, of course, thought my case would not be considered, but when he requested the worst case of deafness to come upon the stage I went. He treated me and I heard a whisper on the stage, but fearing there might be some fake about it, I took a seat in the center of the house and was able to hear distinctly every word spoken. Ten minutes before that, I sat in the front row and could not hear a word. My friends told me it would not last, that I would be as deaf as ever next day. I admit I thought so too, but that was three weeks ago and my hearing is growing more acute every day. I do not pretend to know how it was done and I don't care. I know I was deaf over 20 years and noises of the world were shut off from me, but the past two weeks the noises of the streets, people talking and other ordinary noises sounds so very loud that they annoy me.

"Respectfully,"

"R. H. DOWNEY."

The Boy Phenomenon not only cures such diseases as above but nearly all chronic diseases yield to vital magnetism. No matter what your disease, how long standing, how many others have tried and failed. No matter what your doubts, if curable at all, magnetism as possessed by the Boy Phenomenon will cure you.

Having discharged so many cases the past week as permanently cured of various diseases, he now has more time to devote to consulting and treating new cases.

There being such a large number who desired consultation and treatment the past week, but being unable to treat all who called, he has decided to extend the reduced prices one

AMUSEMENTS

GREAT SOUTHERN THEATER.

The demand for seats is particularly heavy for Mr. Sothern's new play, written for him by Laurence Irving and entitled "The Fool Hath Said in His Heart, There is No God." The central character is a student, a scoffing atheist, a nihilist of idealistic tendencies named Rodion. The argument is strung upon the story of Rodion's sacrificial murder of a bestial landlord, and the dramatic interest of the play is developed in Rodion's long continued evasion of constantly impending exposure, and in a wretched but deeply religious girl's martyr-like fight for the martyr's soul. Mr. Sothern will present this piece on Monday evening, October 28, and on Tuesday, October 29, will play "If I Were King," at the Southern. Columbus.

The well known fun maker, Ezra Kendall, will appear in the most worthy vehicle he has had since emerging from the vaudeville stage to the legitimate stage at the Southern theater on Wednesday, October 30. This is a new play from the pen of George Ade, entitled "The Land of Dollars."

The Southern will offer on Friday and Saturday, one of the standard attractions of the year in Eleanor Robinson, who will play "Salomy Jane," Paul Armstrong's dramatization of Bret Harte's story of the same name. In this piece Miss Robinson achieved her greatest popularity in New York since the time when she played to capacity houses in "Mabel's Mary Ann." For a charming drama which leaves a wholesome impression, it is safe to say few productions equal that of "Salomy Jane."

THE GIRL OF THE SUNNY SOUTH

The Story of the Play.

Captain Searelle, while on the field of Chancellorsville, is lured away from the lines by his commanding officer, Colonel Raymond, who is infatuated with Grace, the captain's wife. Searelle is court-martialed and sentenced to death as a coward. Raymond induces Searelle to make a way leaving all his possessions to his wife. Overcome with emotion the captain asks Raymond to write the will for him. As he is about to sign it, he is called away by headquarters. In the interim Raymond writes another will leaving all the property to himself. The real will is burnt but is saved by a Frenchman, Leroy, who all is exultant, the tale will be substituted and he signs it. He is led away to execution, and the camp is attacked by the federalists. The young party all around Searelle, and he loses his memory and identity by the blow. He is captured and placed in the federal prison.

EDITH WARREN

In "The Girl of the Sunny South."

Five years elapse and Raymond is in possession of the property. He holds a mortgage on the old plantation and threatens to foreclose it unless Grace comes to his rescue. In the interim Raymond is struck down by a bullet and a down-tramp unrecognized and unknown, saves his wife from the persecutions of the colonel. He is made a welcome guest in the home and while asleep, Raymond and Leroy enter to steal the cotton money that is to pay off the mortgage. The old judge Grace's uncle, a somnambulist, and being fearful for the safety of the money, walks in his sleep and takes the money. Imagining that he is giving it to Grace for security, he hands it to Raymond, from whom Leroy steals it. The old judge awakens and accuses the house and is killed by Raymond. The tramp Searelle awakens and in his endeavor to capture the robbers, is stricken down. The blow brings back his memory, and he sees the vision of his own execution five years ago. He is arrested for the murder of the judge and he imagines he really killed him. This escape from the prison and Searelle goes to Australia. The real gold is found by the tramp and he returns with a fortune. He wheedles the truth out of Leroy and faces Raymond. The truth comes out and Raymond moves his just deserts. The tramp and Leroy are both sentenced to the penitentiary for life. The play that is truly full of thrilling incidents.

At the Auditorium tonight more week. Therefore, those who wish to take advantage of the very low fees this coming week may call any day at his private office, at the Warden hotel, from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. and 7 to 8 evenings.

You'll lose your vote if you are not registered. Do it tonight.

CATARH CAN NOT BE CURED

With LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood and mucous surface disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quick medicine. It is prescribed by one of the best physicians in the country for years and is a regular prescription. Sold by Druggists price 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

ORPHIUM THEATER.

An extraordinary attraction is the feature of next week's bill, Miss Anna Eva Ray, in "Solomony," the greatest wonder of the age. Your mind is an open book to Miss Ray. Write a question, seal it in an envelope, hand it to the gentleman passing through the audience. Without breaking the seal Miss Ray will tell you the question and the answer. This is only a trivial incident of her wonderful power. This week she is playing at Mt. Vernon and the sale of seats for the entire week was sold out on Wednesday evening. What the press has to say "Never before in the history of the Grand Opera House have seats been in such demand; a line of over 100 could be seen at 7 o'clock in the morning, waiting patiently for 9 o'clock so they might secure seats for the Rays."—Decatur Republican, Decatur, Ill.

The remainder of the bill is excellent.

Don't forget the rocker given away tonight.

AT WELLER, ZANESVILLE.

At the Weller theater, Zanesville, on Monday evening, October 28, Henry Savage's gem of comic opera, "Woodland," will be seen and enjoyed. On Wednesday, October 30, at the Weller, DeWolfe Hopper will appear in "Happyland," after each performance for Newark. See adv. in today's Advocate.

AL H. (METZ) WILSON.

Golden-voiced singer, Al H. Wilson, the clever German dialect comedian in Sidney R. Ellis' new play, of picturesque Switzerland, "Metz in the Alps," will be at the Auditorium next Thursday evening. Mr. Wilson is a born actor of undeniable ability. He is favored with a fine stage presence, a magnetic manner, and an intelligent and expressive face that can at one moment depict touching pathos and at the next convulse his auditors with heartiest laughter. He also possesses the heaven-sent gift of a singing voice of remarkable power and sweetness, which so well is described by Mr. George F. Cooke, the celebrated dramatic critic of the Detroit Free Press. Mr. Goodale writes: "He sings ballads with rare feeling, and his voice has that swaying quality that is above, beyond and wholly out of the reach of art." Following are the titles of the songs that Mr. Wilson is singing this season: "Fairest Flower of All," "Wilson's Lullaby," "Songs of Old Fatherland," "Smilebank," and "Switzer Le Bys."

Teeming with life, action, bright snappy songs, wit and fun, "The Maxima Man," with comical little George Sidney at its head, will come to the Auditorium next Friday evening. Mr. Sidney is surrounded by a company of fifty famous comedienne dancers and singers, the chorus contingent being a marvel of beauty encoined in bright and brilliant costumes.

There are few things among his possessions which Francis MacMillen, the violinist, prizes more highly than the gold medal which was presented to him by the Daughters of the American Revolution at Marietta, Ohio, just previous to sailing for England where he is now having a sensational tour. MacMillen is a great favorite in Marietta, and at his last concert the Daughters of the American Revolution conferred the honor of presenting him with the medal.

He appears at the Auditorium in November.

I am now doing business again as of old and am still gaining daily." Best tonic medicine on earth. Guaranteed by F. D. Hall, druggist. 50c.

One of the Important Duties of Physicians and the Well-Informed of the World is to learn as to the relative standing and reliability of the leading manufacturers of medicinal agents, as the most eminent physicians are the most careful as to the uniform quality and perfect purity of remedies prescribed by them, and it is well known to physicians and the Well-Informed generally that the California Fig Syrup Co., by reason of its correct methods and perfect equipment and the ethical character of its product has attained to the high standing in scientific and commercial circles which is accorded to successful and reliable houses only, and, therefore, that the name of the Company has become a guarantee of the excellence of its remedy.

TRUTH AND QUALITY

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing, therefore we wish to call the attention of all who would enjoy good health, with its blessings, to the fact that it involves the question of right living with all the term implies. With proper knowledge of what is best each hour of recreation, of enjoyment, of contemplation and of effort may be made to contribute to that end and the use of medicines dispensed with generally to great advantage, but as in many instances a simple, wholesome remedy may be invaluable if taken at the proper time, the California Fig Syrup Co. feels that it is alike important to present truthfully the subject and to supply the one perfect laxative remedy which has won the approval of physicians and the world-wide acceptance of the Well-Informed because of the excellence of the combination, known to all, and the original method of manufacture, which is known to the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent of family laxatives, and as its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well-Informed of the world to be the best of natural laxatives, we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package, whether you simply call for—Syrup of Figs—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—is the one laxative remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. and the same heretofore known by the name—Syrup of Figs—which has given satisfaction to millions. The genuine is for sale by all leading druggists throughout the United States in original packages of one size only, the regular price of which is fifty cents per bottle.

Every bottle is sold under the general guarantee of the Company, filed with the Secretary of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., that the remedy is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the Food and Drugs Act, June 30th, 1906.

HERR SPIEGLEBURGER. SUCH A GOOD JOKE VAS IT IS!

THE WORLD'S BEST SHORT FICTION

A LITTLE SURPRISE—By Mary Stewart Cutting

NITA GIBBONS had been waiting outside at the station on the bench nearest the field since twenty minutes of six, and it was now nearly seven as she rose to go. The bright pleasure with which she had started out was fled, he had not come. The sun, wind and perfume of the Spring afternoon in combination with a becoming new suit and hat had produced their annual effect of inspiring her to surprise her husband by meeting him on his return from town, that they might walk home bridally together in the sweet evening daylight. She had been hitherto undeterred by remembrance of the historic fact that Mr. Gibbons was never known to come on time when thus pleasantly expected; but memory was beginning to chill her now, as well as the wind on her back. She had done all this before.

Tet what business, unknown this morning, could have kept him? It was neither the first nor the last of the month, always mysterious days of threatened detention. He had not passed her by unnoticed, for she had risen as each train came in to scan the men who dropped on the platform and hurried off, some of them looking back to raise their hats to the pretty woman on the platform.

She hurried now as she walked across the field, feeling guiltily amid her disappointment that dinner would be waiting, and that she had left no word of her whereabouts with the maid, having in fact slipped out of the house unseen, to escape the clamoring notice of her only child, who was near his early bedtime.

"Good evening, Mrs. Gibbons. Coming back from town so late?" She looked up to see a friend approaching on the footpath.

"Oh, good evening, Mr. Ferris! No, I've only come from the station. I've been looking for my husband."

"He stopped half way past here."

"Why, he came out in the five-fifteen with me! He slipped off when it slowed up, and jumped down the embankment; he said he was in a hurry to get home. Too bad you've missed him."

"Yes, it is," said Mrs. Gibbons, hastily, breaking almost into a run. Arnold, she knew, hated to find her out of the house.

As she went up the steps now, the door opened before she reached it, and an excited voice exclaimed: "Ah, ma'am, it's yourself at last! It's the neighborhood we do be having searched for you!"

"What do you mean, Katy?" Mrs. Gibbons, who had stood arrested on the threshold, pushed her way in. "Where is Mr. Gibbons?"

"He's gone."

"Gone!"

"Yes, ma'am, gone back to the city. 'Twas like this: He bid me say that he had to be meeting friends—I discerned the name—on the other side, at the ferry, or he could have telephoned 'em, ma'am. 'Twas a grand dinner they had planned for to-night, unexpected like."

"Was the name—?" Mrs. Gibbons paused that she might have courage to grasp her loss—"Was the name Atterbury?"

"It was, ma'am."

Her beloved Atterburys! They were to sail for Rio at the end of the week. This was a dinner and a theater party planned before and postponed. They could not have it without her.

"Mr. Gibbons must have known I'd be home in a minute."

"Sure, he waited for you, ma'am, till he had to run to the station below to catch the express; but he bid me tell you to be sure and take the seven o'clock train in, and he'd keep the party waiting at the ferry for you."

Mrs. Gibbons glanced at the clock. It was after seven now! But there was a seven-twenty-five train which reached town almost as soon, and Arnold would surely wait for that, even if the others had gone on the Martin's, where they would dine. The Atterburys always went to Martin's. She was accustomed to try and bend fate to her uses with an uncalculating ardor that focused itself entirely on the impulse of the moment. To the suburbanite a little dinner in town is the height of pleasure, the one perfect feast! And with the Atterburys! She really could not miss it.

"I don't care for anything to eat."

"You'll come to supper with us now? Just around the corner!"

"Oh, yes!" Mrs. Worthington was almost animated. "If we have time," she added, turning to her husband.

"Why, we can't get the twelve o'clock, if we stay, but we will have plenty of time for the twelve-thirty, if Mrs. Gibbons doesn't object," said Mr. Worthington.

"We have a friend with us," said Mrs. Worthington, in languid explanation. "Mrs. Gibbons, Mrs. Freshet, Mr. Freshet."

"We will, of course, be pleased to have your friend take supper with us," said Mrs. Freshet.

"How could Mrs. Gibbons object? Her eyes pleaded, but her lips were perforce silent; and, comfortably settled in the restaurant, the others talked about matters of common interest, while she sat on the edge of her chair by the gleaming little table, and tumbled at her oysters with her fork, watching the hands of the clock at the end of the room. The Freshets were even more ornately dressed than the Worthingtons, with a floridity of manner that somehow overstepped a certain delicate line.

Once Mrs. Freshet smiled at the guest over her white satin and sables to ask:

"Is this the friend of whose beautiful home I have heard so much?"

"I think not," said Mrs. Gibbons, with a stricken glimpse of the interior of her little dwelling. "I only met the Worthingtons by accident to-night," she added, impulsively, with a longing for sympathy. "I was looking for my husband."

"How singular!" said Mrs. Freshet, with a blank stare, and turned at once to continue a conversation on bargains with Mrs. Worthington, while Mrs. Gibbons, trying to make brightly remarks in response to Mr. Freshet and Mr. Worthington, agonizingly watched the clock. Ten minutes of twelve—five minutes of twelve—she could not have stood it a second longer when Mr. Worthington rose to hurry them on.

The rushing of the elevated train could not keep up with Mrs. Gibbons' hastening spirit; but somehow, inexplicably, after a while even the rushing stopped—the train halted—went forward a little—and halted again, between stations.

"Oh, what is the matter?" said Mrs. Gibbons as Mr. Worthington returned with several men from investigation.

"Oh, nothing to speak of; there's a fire ahead somewhere, and we're blocked for a few minutes. Mrs. Gibbons—Madame! Pray keep your seat, you can not get out!"

"They do say as there's a family yet in the burning house," suggested a sympathetic listener.

"Xaw, they got 'em out, there's two firemen hurted," said another.

"What is it, Amelia?" Mr. Worthington turned his attention hastily from Mrs. Gibbons to his wife. "Do you feel faint?"

"No, I don't feel faint," she dictated rapidly. "See that it doesn't get uncovered, and don't let the front door. We'll be home before twelve, but you needn't sit up for us. Just lie on the lounge in the nursery." She did not remind forgetful Katy to put the milk tickets in the pail set outside the back door, and she remembered to do so as she was half-way to the station.

The train was due in town at eight-fifteen, but it was late here, and the extra minutes seemed a thousand "prickly seconds." The Spring twilight was coming to a close, and when she stepped into the car in which the lamps gleamed dully over the plush seats, it was like stepping into the long tunnel of the night. Only a few men from further up the road sprawled and dozed wearily on their way. She was unaccustomed to going out thus alone, and for an instant a panic-struck thought of failure seized her, but she lost it in the action of her hurrying brain, which constantly pictured the delightful meeting with her expectant husband and the waiting party. By the incalculable law of travel, which ordains that delay in one mode of locomotion means delay in every other, the ferryboat could not "hit her clip," but wobbled up and down crosswise in the current, bumping against the piles at either end, with much ringing of the pilot's bell, and losing of minutes—and minutes—and minutes. But at last Mrs. Gibbons made her way into the big, lighted waiting room, the haven of her hopes. It took no more than one glance to reveal that there was neither group nor husband waiting for her. The place was entirely empty, save for a few Italian emigrants, and the clock pointed to twenty minutes of nine.

So vividly had Mrs. Gibbons pictured her own state of mind as that of her husband's habit of which fell experience could not break her—that even in the shock of not finding him she felt instantly that some provision had been made for this contingency. She could go straight over and join the party at Martin's, but he might have left some word for her. The man at the news stand might know. She hovered uncertainly around the pictorial exhibit, trying to screw up a suddenly-waning courage, and then found voice to say engagingly:

"I'm looking for my husband."

"What did you say, lady?" The man stopped in his work of sorting papers.

"I'm looking for my husband. He's been waiting for me here for a long time—with a party—but he's gone now. I thought perhaps he had left some message here with you."

"What kind of a looking man was he?" asked the news clerk. He leaned forward companionably.

"He—his tall and clean shaven, with a light overcoat and blue eyes—and—"

She groped around for some distinguishing characteristic to elicit a gleam of response—"a square chin—with a dimple in it." She felt her own fatuousness. "You—you'd know him if you saw him."

The clerk turned to the boy who had appeared behind the counter.

"Did you see a man with a light overcoat, and—a spasm passed over his face—and a dimple in his chin? Did he leave any message here? Mrs. Gibbons felt hotly that he was laughing at her, although he looked impassive."

"Ah—h!" said the boy. "He didn't leave no message with me." He added on reflection, "I ain't seen no one hanging 'round but a chunky feller with a black mustache."

"He hasn't seen any one but a stout man with a black mustache," reported the clerk officially, while two pairs of eyes stared at her in a disconcerting manner.

"Good evening, Mrs. Gibbons; is there anything we can do for you?"

"Oh, Mrs. Worthington—and Mr. Worthington!" Mrs. Gibbons looked as one who sees a familiar face in a desert.

"You don't know how glad I am to meet you! I'm looking for my husband."

"Indeed!" said Mrs. Worthington, with a faint chill of surprise. She was a slight woman, elegantly gowned, with a thin, expressionless face. Her husband was like unto her, with the overcoat of opulence. They were new neighbors of Mrs. Gibbons, who kept themselves politely aloof from suburban social life, expending most of their time in town, where they seemed to have a large connection. They were perhaps the last persons to whom Mrs. Gibbons would have turned in a dilemma, but she found comfort in their curious attention as she explained the situation, to conclude by saying:

"Of course, I'll go right over now to Martin's. If they waited for me here until after eight they would be hardly more than started at dinner. All I want to know is what car I ought to take."

Mrs. Worthington's eyelids flickered a response to her husband.

"Pray allow us to escort you there," said Mr. Worthington. "It is really quite our way."

"Oh, you're very kind," said Mrs. Gibbons, following her leaders gratefully, after a moment or two of demur. She had naturally the feeling that when a man took the thing in hand it would be all right.

"I don't know it was so dark at night when you were out alone by yourself, until I came off the ferryboat," she confided.

Mrs. Worthington's eyelids flickered assent. She sat in the trolley-car in a sort of isolated though subdued richness of attire, her heavy silken skirts folded over decorously to escape contaminating touch, her embossed cloak and large boa held elegantly in place with her white-gloved hand. She seemed to demand a coach and four. The light Spring suit which Mrs. Gibbons had thought so fetching in the afternoon looked cheap and thin in the blue intenseness of her eyes and the rich flush of her young cheek which made each man who entered the car turn to look at her.

When Mr. Worthington bent over, the music was, indeed, beautiful, but she still kept hold of the ever-tightening thread of suspense and longing; at Martin's," she answered with her bright, upward glance. "Oh, yes, quite sure." He would be at a little round table, with John and Agnes Atterbury, in the red-carpeted room, looking out for her and how glad they would be to see her!

She dashed up the steps ahead of the Worthingtons, and a waiter came definitionally forward. Why should her heart suddenly fall her when she stood looking in upon the lighted scene?

"I'm looking for my husband," said Mrs. Gibbons. She dashed from one doorway to another, peering in. "No, he isn't here—perhaps in the other room—I don't see him here either. It's very strange—very!"

"What is it Madame desires?" The headwaiter was following her rushing movements.

on him. She would have liked to feel faint. But instead, she was forced, in common decency, to be solicitous too for Mrs. Worthington, although she had begun to hate her. Mr. Worthington looked nervously at his watch until the train started again, and when they got out to walk to the ferry, he hurried the wife along at a pace with which Mrs. Gibbons tried in vain to keep up over the uneven, dirty, dimly-lighted pavements in those winding streets near the river. Arnold never let her walk so fast that way; she owned an ankle that had once been sprained, and sometimes now turned under her disastrously. But hurry as she might, they hurried faster, under the impulse of the new fear which made itself felt to her without the need of words. She caught up to the couple and clutched them as they stood suddenly motionless, inside the ferry house, facing her.

"What do you stop for? Why don't you go on?" she demanded fiercely, all how utterly married she was, how long she had ceased to remember the independence of her girlhood, for what a short distance her little struggles and flights were planned! So helpless, so forlorn, so terribly outside of life was she without him, without that individual care which was as much a part of existence as her own ability to raise her food to her mouth, or move one foot before another! She thought of a woman she knew who had lost her husband, and who had said, "I did not know it could be like this." He had "given his body to the storm" many a time and off for her dear sake; yet even for her a day might sometime come—like this—when her soft cheek was cold and wet, and even though her thought of him put those milk tickets in the pail so that the child would not be bereft in the morning. One must always remember a little child's needs.

"You're frightenin' the lady, ye big bloke."

"I ain't frightenin' of her, ye—"

She shrank painfully at the notice thrust upon her. For hours, and hours, and hours they were jiggling off over the dark salt meadows.

Crash, lurch, jam—everything came to a sudden stop. The conductor called, "All out here for the car ahead."

The sleeping ones awoke. In the scuffle and rush forward Mrs. Gibbons became separated from her friends. The new car was already jammed when she reached it, with fighting in the doorway. With one foot raised to step up she was thrust to one side by a man who leapt from it, followed by several others dashing back across the tracks and down a side street, amid cries of "Catch him! Get the pocket-book! Catch the thief!"

There was a face—could it be her husband's? She turned wildly to peer after it into the blankness outside of the car lights. The next instant the bell had rung, and the car, with the crowd on the platform all looking one way, was vanishing swiftly down the roadway, while Mrs. Gibbons, unnoticed, stood alone upon the rails. She made a futile step after it, and then stopped, appalled. She was left behind.

Opposite was the long, cavernous opening of a car-house, filled with the stalled cars. Near her was a saloon, ending what seemed a scattered row of small, mean houses and shops, closed and dark. Ahead there was a stretch of empty lots, with a faint, stationary glimmer of light down the road. But the saloon, though by no means brilliant, was the lightest place. There was no sound from within. After some hesitation Mrs. Gibbons wandered up on the low platform that topped the two steps, watched by a couple of men from the car-house. Her heart was in her mouth as one of them came forward; but he only glanced at her and went in the saloon, to come out again with a wooden chair.

"Better set," he remarked, laconically, and disappeared across the street. A moment later there were other footsteps from the saloon, and looking up she saw a policeman wiping his mouth.

"Yes," said Mrs. Gibbons, raising her blue and guttless eyes to his. "I didn't know it was going so soon. I was looking for my husband."

The policeman's face changed from solicitude to the cheerful acceptance of a familiar situation.

"Give ye the slip, did he? A lady like you, too! Sure, he's the bad lot, and not-worrit' your lookin' for. Now don't be frettin' yourself, the Queen couldn't be safer. I'm wid you till the car comes. 'Tis an hour away."

"It's very good of you," said Mrs. Gibbons, gratefully.

Of all the chances and changes of this wild Walpurgis night, there could be nothing stranger than this, that she, Nita Gibbons, should be sitting alone amid the dark marshes, in front of a "gin-mill," at half-past two o'clock in the morning. It was so entirely past all imagining that frenzy had left her. She would probably never get home again, but she had ceased to struggle against fate. She sat there instead, passive, her slight figure bent against the cold night wind, and her hair half falling down under her battered hat, looking dreamily at the late twinkling stars in the black sky, and the gloomy car-house opposite, and at the policeman who walked up and down through the shadows. He swayed a little unsteadily, but he represented the guardianship of the law. Once he came close to her and asked encouragingly, "Would ye like a doggy?"

"What kind?" said Mrs. Gibbons, with a hazy fear of too large a protective animal.

He pointed over his shoulder toward the stationary light down the road. "The kind they do be havin' in the Owl Wagon, down there—frankfooties or doggies, 'tis the same. I could get ye wan, wid a roll, they're cleaned out in the gloom here."

"Thank you, I'd rather not eat," said Mrs. Gibbons in haste, and she started nervously at the noise of footstep running broke upon her ear. The three men who had followed the thief came in sight from the direction in which they had fled from the car. One called out, "Good-night, I'm going to hoof it home!"

Another voice also called, "Glad you got your pocketbook back again—you ought to have got the fellow, too."

The third said nothing as he came toward the platform. Mrs. Gibbons turned her head away. The next instant a voice of amazement said, "Nita! You here!" and looking up she saw her husband.

"Oh, Arnold, Arnold!" She stopped short in view of his face. "Oh, Arnold, I don't wonder you're surprised to see me, dear, but I've been looking for you!"

"Looking for me! Nita! Nita! Nita!" The astonishment in his voice held something ominous in it. She clung to his arm with both hands, as she rose with him, and hardly realized, in her excited explaining and explaining, that she was being borne off down the road without waiting for the car, at a tremendous pace, and still spasmodically explaining to a portentous silence. When he spoke at last it was in a tone that sounded dangerous:

"So the Worthingtons went off and left you?"

"No, no, they were in the car, they—"

"Till—I'll see Worthington to-morrow!" He paused for control, and Mrs. Gibbons had a swift vision of Mr. Worthington's head rolling off into a basket. "I never heard of such a thing—I never heard of such a thing! It all comes of your being out of the house when I came home. What on earth you want to go wild-goose chasing for at the very time you know I'm coming home—"

"But, Arnold, I didn't go wild-goose chasing. I went to the station to surprise you."

"His anger grew. 'To surprise me! Then let me know next time you want to surprise me. I've had enough surprise to last me all the rest of my life.'"

He broke off with a shudder, as if the thought were too much for him.

"Well, you just missed it, being with us to-night. You'll never have such another chance, never. The Atterburys won't be back for five years."

"And did you enjoy it without me?"

"Enjoy it! Of course I enjoyed it. I'd have been a fool not to. I had a glorious time, the best dinner I ever ate, and Atterbury—What on earth you wanted to spoil it all for I can't see. Take care!"—his arm went around her closely. "You'll turn your ankle."

His touch was ineffably gentle and sure, in spite of the masterful rage of his tone.

"Oh, Arnold, I've been so unhappy all the evening. I—"

He went on, remorseless. "I'm glad you were, hope you were unhappy. It will teach you never to do such a thing again. When you didn't meet us at the ferry, I was confounded. I couldn't think what had happened to you. If everything hadn't been ordered ahead, tickets and all, I'd have come straight home, but I couldn't leave the Atterburys in the lurch when you had, though I hated to go without you. It just spoiled the whole thing. I've been worrying ever since that infernal hold-up in the elevated, thinking of you at home alone, and then I find you galivanting around at the junction at three o'clock in the morning, after coming out in that outrageous car. If I'd known you were there—I Well, you were just crazy to do such a thing."

He set his teeth—"It makes me wild to think what happened. I'll be afraid to go off and leave you home alone. I don't know what you'll do. You ought to be looked after like a child. You oughtn't to be left a minute. What's the matter?"

He slowed up the pace that was rapidly nearing them to home. His storming voice deepened reluctantly into a distressful tenderness.

"What's the matter? You mustn't cry in the street, Nita! You mustn't, dear."

"Oh, I've had such a horrid, horrid, horrid time!" The tears were blinding her so that she leaned unseeing on the enfolding arm that guided her. "I don't mind you're scolding me. I'm not crying for that. I don't mind anything you say. I don't mind even your not having kissed me. Nothing makes any difference to me as long as it's you. I am crying because I'm so glad it's you, and I can hear your voice again. Why, I was trying to find you and it seemed—I it would never end; it seemed—I seemed—" She raised her wet eyes to his.

He took a swift look up and down the empty, lifeless street, laid out straight and stiff in the cold, faint glimmer of the dawn, then his faint sought hers in deep, deep acknowledgment of the joy, and of the sorrow, to which love is born—one of those moments stolen in its beautifulness from the life to come.

But his voice was tense again, as he set her down within her own doorway, and looked at her with stern eyes of jealous care, from which she hid the woman's smile of love at dear love's unreason.

"You're nearly dead. Don't you stir out of the house to-morrow until I come home again—do you hear? Never surprise me again!"

(Copyright, S. S. McClure Co.)

"Never surprise me again!"

"You'll come to supper with us now? Just around the corner!"

"Oh, yes!" Mrs. Worthington was almost animated. "If we have time," she added, turning to her husband.

"Why, we can't get the twelve o'clock, if we stay, but we will have plenty of time for the twelve-thirty, if Mrs. Gibbons doesn't object," said Mr. Worthington.

"We have a friend with us," said Mrs. Worthington, in languid explanation. "Mrs. Gibbons, Mrs. Freshet, Mr. Freshet."

"We will, of course, be pleased to have your friend take supper with us," said Mrs. Freshet.

"How could Mrs. Gibbons object? Her eyes pleaded, but her lips were perforce silent; and, comfortably settled in the restaurant, the others talked about matters of common interest, while she sat on the edge of her chair by the gleaming little table, and tumbled at her oysters with her fork, watching the hands of the clock at the end of the room. The Freshets were even more ornately dressed than the Worthingtons, with a floridity of manner that somehow overstepped a certain delicate line.

Once Mrs. Freshet smiled at the guest over her white satin and sables to ask:

"Is this the friend of whose beautiful home I have heard so much?"

"I think not," said Mrs. Gibbons, with a stricken glimpse of the interior of her little dwelling. "I only met the Worthingtons by accident to-night," she added, impulsively, with a longing for sympathy. "I was looking for my husband."

"How singular!" said Mrs. Freshet, with a blank stare, and turned at once to continue a conversation on bargains with Mrs. Worthington, while Mrs. Gibbons, trying to make brightly remarks in response to Mr. Freshet and Mr. Worthington, agonizingly watched the clock. Ten minutes of twelve—five minutes of twelve—she could not have stood it a second longer when Mr. Worthington rose to hurry them on.

The rushing of the elevated train could not keep up with Mrs. Gibbons' hastening spirit; but somehow, inexplicably, after a while even the rushing stopped—the train halted—went forward a little—and halted again, between stations.

"Oh, what is the matter?" said Mrs. Gibbons as Mr. Worthington returned with several men from investigation.

"Oh, nothing to speak of; there's a fire ahead somewhere, and we're blocked for a few minutes. Mrs. Gibbons—Madame! Pray keep your seat, you can not get out!"

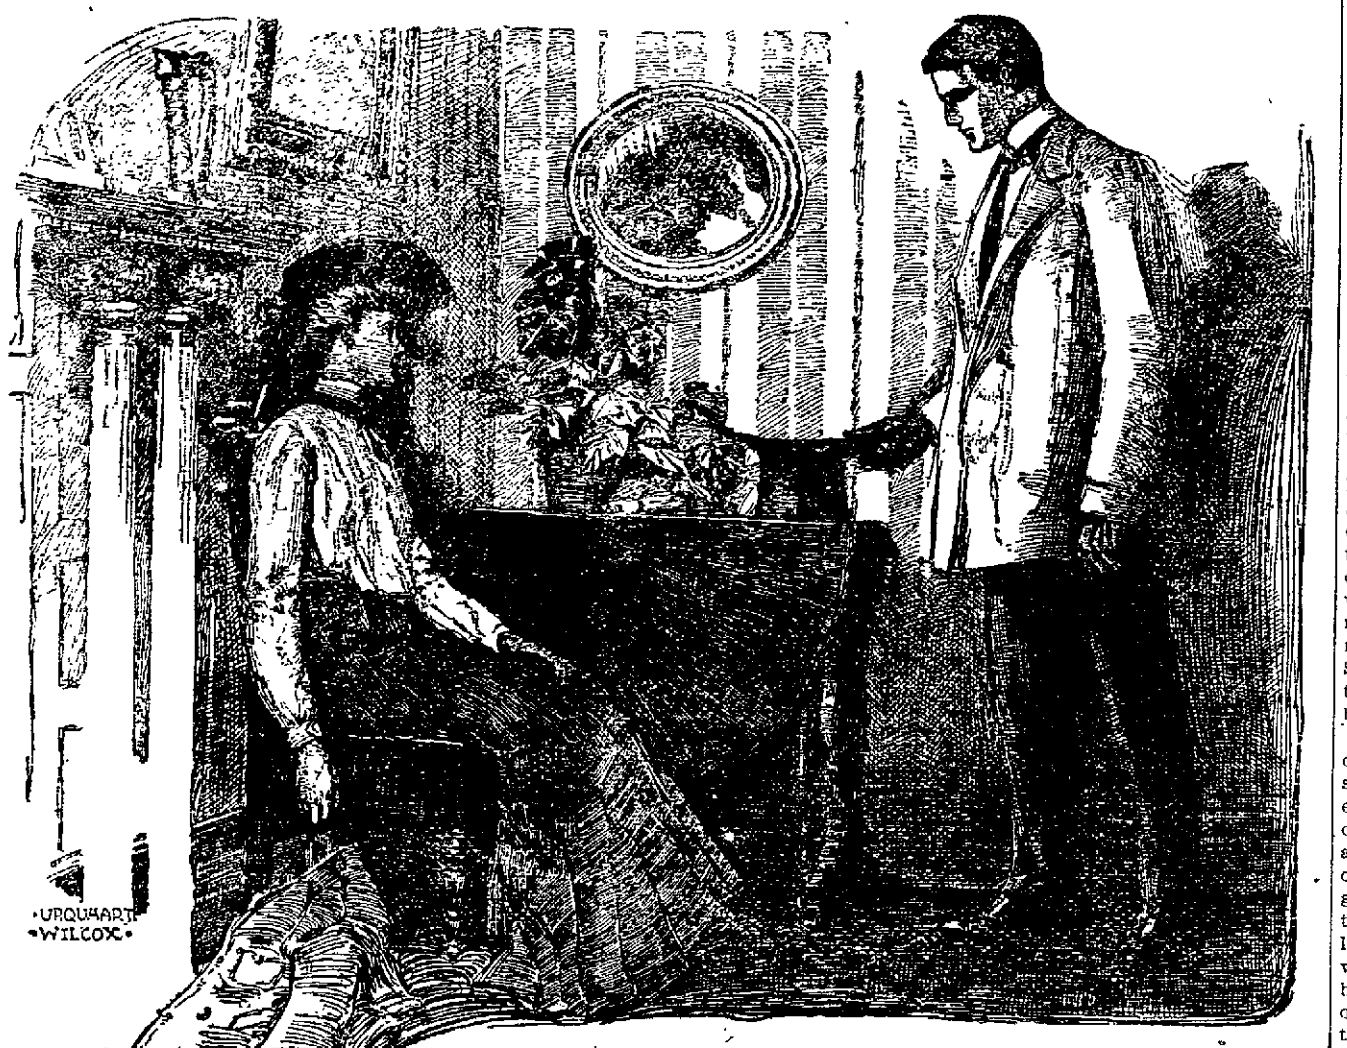

"They do say as there's a family yet in the burning house," suggested a sympathetic listener.

"Xaw, they got 'em out, there's two firemen hurted," said another.

"What is it, Amelia?" Mr. Worthington turned his attention hastily from Mrs. Gibbons to his wife. "Do you feel faint?"

"A little," murmured Mrs. Worthington, reproachfully.

Mrs. Gibbons had a sickened feeling. She could have felt faint too, if her husband had been along to sit down by her solicitously, and tell her to lean

FASHION HINTS

Gloves come in all shades of brown and tan from richest copper to palest canary color.

The newest tortoise shell combs and hairpins show a diagonal finish in tortoise shell. The large knobs, gold and jeweled effects are no longer good form.

The new muffs, it is said, will be large and very round.

All tailored coats have full length sleeves, and all dressy wraps have short ones.

Young girls and children will wear quantities of plaids and checks, with plain colored hair ribbons.

In decolette gowns the V shape has replaced the round or square neck.

Cashmere seems to be popular material for house gowns. Wool batiste is a close second.

Velvet ribbon and fine flowers will be combined for trimming the collar in the evenings.

The new hats require the hair to be arranged loosely, softly and in large quantities around the face. It promises to be a great season for the hair dresser and the manufacturers of false hair.

Braiding of all sorts is in great vogue. Side bags and chapeaux of velvet or cloth to match the gown, braided with soutache, are much seen.

Cross-barred handkerchiefs continue in vogue for morning or tailored wear. Round corners with a little bit of embroidery mark the afternoon handkerchief. Party handkerchiefs have scalloped edges underlaid with blond lace or net.

CAKE RECIPES

Cocoanut Layer Cake.—One half cup of butter, one and a quarter cups sugar, whites eight eggs, two and a half cups of flour, one quarter teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon baking powder, one teaspoon vanilla. Bake in three-layer cake pans. When cold put together with this filling: one cup grated cocoanut, one cup sugar, one cup milk, two eggs. Cook all together five minutes. Flavor with vanilla.

Gold Cake.—Half cup butter, one cup sugar, yolks of six eggs, two cups flour, quarter teaspoon of salt, heaping teaspoon of baking powder, grated rind and strained juice of one large orange. Bake in shallow pan in moderate oven and ice with orange icing. To make this latter grade the skin from an orange, add about half the juice and a dash of ice water, then stir in slowly pulverized sugar, or, better still, confectioners' sugar, which has been carefully sifted.

Hazelnut Cake.—Nine ounces of flour (a pint of sifted flour, heaping measure), four ounces butter, four ounces sugar, four ounces chopped hazelnuts, four eggs, teaspoon of vanilla, quarter teaspoon of salt, teaspoon of baking powder. Bake in shallow pan in medium oven and when cold, ice with boiled icing.

Maple Sugar Cake.—Two cups sugar, one cup milk, three-fourths cup of butter, three cups of flour, three large teaspoons of baking powder, four eggs beaten separately, bake in square pan. Frosting.—One cup maple sugar, just enough water to boil. When this waxes, stir slowly into beaten white of one egg.

A GOSSIP

MRS. HARRISON and Mrs. Adams were exchanging confidences over the line fence that separated their back yards. "Who are those people that have moved into the house on the other side of you?" said Mrs. Adams. "Judging from the looks of their furniture, I don't think they amount to much."

"Their name is Monroe," answered Mrs. Harrison. "I don't know them, but I've heard of them. The man works in a photograph gallery. They've got four children, a dog and a canary bird."

"Their window shades don't fit, and they've tacked up papers to keep people from looking in."

"I guess they haven't much money. I heard the man tell the driver of the moving wagon that he'd pay him next week."

"The oldest boy is cross-eyed and has red hair. The youngest one is a regular little imp. Goes around with one of her stockings hanging loose and slides down the back stairway."

"The woman has a fierce temper, and boxes the children's ears. And that isn't the worst of it," added Mrs. Harrison, lowering her voice. "They say the way she gossips is just awful. I don't think I shall have anything to do with her."

POOR VALUE

D. R. J. ALLEN SMITH, of Seattle, advises the young not to marry until the present era of high prices is in some way bettered.

Discussing high prices the other day Dr. Smith said:

"One gets for one's money now the same value that the man got from the druggist."

"Give me, sir," said this man, bitterly, "10 pounds of your fly poison."

"Ten pounds?" said the druggist. "That is rather a large order, isn't it?"

"Yes, I know it is," said the man, "but you see, I liked that half-pound I bought here yesterday extremely well. I gave it to a fly, and he seemed to relish it at first, but towards evening it made him quite ill. I propose to keep up the treatment for a week, for I think that in the end I may manage to kill him."

WANTED

There appear to be openings in life, after all, for the younger female generation of the smart set. We see in a Scotch paper the advertisement:

Fish Trade—Wanted—Girl accustomed to smoking.

Nothing is said about playing bridge, but we suppose that would be a help, too.

MOURNING DRESSES FOR WOMEN

THE first mourning dress for a widow consists of a black worsted skirt and waist, trimmed very simply with folds of English crepe; a bonnet made wholly of crepe, with a long crepe veil falling in the rear to the knees, or even lower, and for the first month or three weeks an equally long veil falling over the face. Just inside the front edge of the bonnet a white ruche of lisse is set, and from wrists and throat bands of hem-stitched white organdie are turned back. Dull jet ornaments, black suede or glacé kid gloves, a black sealskin purse, and black-bordered handkerchiefs complete her sombre attire.

Elderly ladies, as a rule, cling to a slight modification of this mourning for the balance of their days, substituting, after a year and a half or two years, a bonnet and rear drapery of lightweight nun's veiling, and, while leaving off the black border from the handkerchief and crepe trimmings from the gowns, continue to wear none but black dresses, with white muslin wrist and throat bands, black gloves and purse; and use only a little jewelry, and that very simple.

The widow who purposes to leave off her mourning in due time wears a crepe bonnet and long veil and crepe-trimmed gowns a year. After this black costumes of crepe de chine, lustrous silk, etc., are assumed, with hats and bonnets garnished with black ribbon and black flowers, black chiffon, and dull jet ornaments. After six months, white and lilac touches may suitably relieve the second mourning; and after two years have expired, colors may be resumed.

A married woman wears, in mourning for her child, a sister, a brother, or a parent, just such dress as she wears in case of widowhood, with the exception of the white bonnet ruche, which is the unmistakable insignia of widowhood. She also wears her sable raiment one year at the least, though it is in better taste to assume second mourning after a year and a half, and not to go fully into colors until two years.

For infants, mourning is by some deeply sorrowing mothers not worn at all, and where the bereaved parent is blessed with other young children it is kindest to them to wear as little funeral black as possible. A baby boy or girl may be suitably mourned for in simple black, without crepe, relieved with white and lilac, or in soft gray.

Black without crepe for one month will hold them firm, and the broken bit can be slapped on. It is the same with plates and saucers. None of these commonly requires weighting. But very fine pieces, where an invisible seam is wanted, should be held firm until partly set, then have the pair of heaviest weights accurately balanced across the broken place. The weights are also very useful to prop and stay top-heavy things, and balance them so they shall not get out of kilter. A cup broken in half, as is so common with cups, can have the tape passed around it, crossing inside the handle, then be set firmly in the sand, face down, and held by the hanging weights pulling one against the other.

THE HANDY SAND BOX

SINCE breakables have so malicious a knack of fracturing themselves in such fashion they cannot possibly stand upright, one needs a sand-box. It is only a box of handy size with eight inches of clean, coarse sand in the bottom. Along with it there should be some small leaden weights with rings cast in them, running from an ounce to a quarter-pound. Two of each weight are needed. In use, tapes are tied in the rings and the pair of weights swung outside the edges of the box, so as to press in place the upper part of a broken thing to which the tapes have been fastened. Set broken platters on edge in the sand-box, with the break up. The

A FIRST SHORT SET. No. 4154.
THERE is no time in a child's life when he is so altogether lovable as when long baby clothes are shed and he appears in the short dresses which mother has provided. Here is a charming little set consisting of a dress with fanciful yoke, a petticoat and sack. The dress, while very simple, is unique in its yoke, which may be of the plain material, a simple embroidery or tuckings. Tucks at either side of the front are pleasing and give it an air of individuality. The skirt is to be made of lawn or cambric and the sack of flannel or cashmere, and as simple or elaborate as desired. A small round yoke outlines the neck of the sack, while a few shirrs retain the fullness of the front and back. Shirrs also retain the fullness of the sleeve at the wrist, forming a frill instead of the usual cuff. In the medium size the sack requires 1 1/2 yards of 27-inch material, the dress 2 1/2 yards, and the petticoat 1 1/2 yards of 26-inch materials.
No. L 4154—Sizes, 1/2, 1, 2, and 3 years.

A QUANT LITTLE APRON. No. 4223.
The little maids of the present generation are every whit as picturesque in their snowy aprons as were those of the long-ago days when grand-mamma was young. Indeed, the quaint simplicity is very suggestive of those days, being built on the same lines as the "pinafores" that every little girl then wore. It is practical as well as pretty, for it is easily made and easily laundered, having no complicated trimmings to tax time and patience.

SOME PRACTICAL SLEEPING DRAWERS. No. 1160.
Every mother appreciates the practicality of sleeping garments which cover the small wearer from head to foot with not the slightest chance for cold to get in. No amount of tucking and tossing can expose the small person to the night air, and this alone relieves the mother of no end of worry and care. These shown are to be made with or without feet, and with the closing in back. They may be worn by a boy or girl, and should be made of such material as washable flannel, cotton flannel or longcloth. The medium size calls for 2 1/2 yards of 36-inch material.
No. L 1160—Sizes, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 years.

LAMP OIL

NEXT to good lamps comes good oil, properly kept. The best oil is as white and clear as spring water, and will evaporate after a while, leaving no stain.

Oil keeps best in glass, at a temperature between fifty and sixty degrees. Tin cans are light, but in steady use given to springing a leak at the most inconvenient seasons. There is a glass oil can in an open-work tin holder, with bail and handle, and coming in various sizes that answers admirably in careful hands, of where it has only to go to the corner grocery for filling. Folk who must fetch home their oil supply in a farm wagon, and presumably over rough roads, will find nothing else quite so good for holding it as a five-gallon demijohn, with its wicker-work still staunch. The demijohn is of manageable size, does not overheat or break easily, and never, never leaks. With reasonable care it will last a lifetime, and still be a heritable asset.

CANARY HINTS

N breeding canaries, keep the male away from the nest after brooding begins. He might possibly make no trouble, but the chances are that he would drive away his wife, and saddle the eggs hopelessly. After the young birds hatch, let both parents care for them. Provide fresh soft food twice a day—hard-boiled egg-yolk, mixed with bread-crumbs soaked in milk, scraped apple, soaked fig, or very ripe berries. All this in addition to plenty of seed and bird-manna for an hour each day.

The bird-manna can be bought at any good drug store. Get thence packages of bird-gravel, both red and white. The red supplies iron; the white, sharp, fine grit, to help in grinding up seeds. Buy also bird-biters; there are several good sorts. Administer them in homeopathic doses by putting two drops in the drinking fountain every other day.

Do's and Don'ts for Young Dancers

Only by experience does a girl or a young man gain that ease at social functions which prevents impetuous, thoughtless mistakes. The half-grown-up who is forever thinking "Should I do this or that?" becomes awkward, self-conscious and mortified. The girl who goes to the other extreme and becomes self-confident and reckless, is apt to make herself conspicuous. The quiet, pleasant demeanor which is a happy medium between the two extremes mentioned above, comes only after one is accustomed to mingling socially with those who are perhaps a trifle older. Just as you walk stiffly and awkwardly in a brand new pair of shoes, so must you expect a few awkward mis-steps when you begin to walk the social pathway after the more childish freedom of schoolyard, pond and porch. You must become accustomed to certain restraints which you have never felt in your previous intercourse with young playmates; but if you will always bear in mind that good form is founded on thoughtfulness of others, if you will always avoid doing anything to others that you know would hurt yourself, you will never violate a rule of so-called etiquette.

For instance, perhaps you are at your first dance.

You have just discovered that you are not awkward and a poor dancer, but a pretty and desirable dancing partner, very much in demand among the young men. But there is one young man whom all the girls admire—and you are sitting out a dance with him in a shadowy alcove in the rear hall. Now and then, other couples pass the nook, and the girl glances at you enviously.

And this rather turns your head, so when the popular young man asks you to sit out the next dance with him, dance that belongs to another partner, member that if Cinderella had not obeyed the midnight warning, the Prince would never have followed her to her home.

Now a few hints for the boys, too. When you enter the parlor or dance hall, with the young lady whom you are escorting, you let her precede you in greeting the hostess. You do not enter the room arm in arm. In fact, even in promenade at a dance, very few girls expect you to offer an arm. This is not done until dancing actually begins.

Don't slip off to the smoking-room and miss a few dances. If you are young, you cannot plead exhaustion so early in the social game, and it is not courtesy to your hostess and the young women she has gathered under her roof to spend in smoking—and I have even known young men to pick up a new novel or magazine and become completely engrossed therein—during the time given over to dancing.

Don't, if you want to be considered manly, use extracts or perfumes of any sort on your handkerchief. The well-groomed man uses in his bath or shaving, some good toilet water or bay rum, but he never resorts to sickening perfumes.

Do not tell the young woman whom you brought to the dance, that it is time to go home. It is her privilege to suggest going, not yours. If she stays too late, you need never ask her again. If she wants to go home early, you must escort her home and then you may return to finish your dancing.

Wrinkles---Their Causes and Cures

The prime cause of wrinkles is worry, or more properly speaking, fretting as a result of worry. The wife and mother who lies awake at night with her forehead drawn in furrows, fretting because it promises to rain on the morrow when the washwoman is due, is bound to have wrinkles. The young girl who cries herself to sleep over some fancy slight will acquire wrinkles before she dons a bridal veil. If women worried only about real troubles instead of imaginary ones, beauty parlors would be half empty.

Remedy No. I. For wrinkles—stop worrying.

Facial contortions also cause deep-seated wrinkles. Girls who screw up their faces every time they laugh, who are intensely emotional and give their emotions free range, and who emphasize remarks with grimaces, must expect to have wrinkles as the price of facial exaggeration.

Remedy No. II. Ask the members of your own family to tell you frankly when you give way to these practices. Study self-control and repose.

Defective eyesight will cause wrinkles between the eyebrows and at the corners of the eyes.

Remedy No. III. If you reveal in a strong light or when reading or sewing, look an o'clock.

If the skin is very delicate and thin, especially the peach-like skin which all women covet, it should be massaged, steamed and the use of persistent lotions will cause wrinkles.

Remedy No. IV. Used often from a specialist the treatment your complexion should have. Do not experiment with a delicate skin—only the women with the oily, large-pored skin should take chances with massage, electricity and steaming. Skin is not subject to wrinkles.

One of the best preventives of wrinkles is the rest room. Any woman of avail herself of this privilege, starting say, with ten minutes every day. Train yourself to lie absolutely relaxed in a dark room as quiet and secluded as you may have at your command.

THE WISE MOTHER

Eric—"May I go out and look at the comet, mummy?"

Mummy—"Yes, dear, but don't go too alone."

started as a 15-cent magazine

Then the business department, in response to a general fad for ten-cent magazines, lowered the price to ten cents, but forgot to tell the editorial department. As a consequence, the editorial department went on making a fifteen-cent magazine. As they kept making it better every year, it soon became a twenty-cent magazine, and then a twenty-five-cent magazine—but the price was still ten cents.

Today McClure's is just as good as we know how to make it, irrespective of price. We know that the five hundred thousand buyers who have so long delighted in McClure's at ten cents will be, if not delighted, at least willing to pay 15 cents. Hence the announcement that on October 1st McClure's Magazine would be 15 cents; $1.50 a year.

But—there is just one opportunity for those who have so long been readers of McClure's still to enjoy it at the old, very low price of $1.00—if they act quickly. As soon as you read this send from one to five dollars for from one to five years' subscription, and send it today. We think you, who have so long loved McClure's Magazine, are entitled to get it at the old price for a little longer. Send the money in any convenient form—check, money order or bills—but send it today and don't forget your name and address.

THE jaunty and serviceable covert cloth jacket promises to continue in favor indefinitely and will be much worn this season. This one is in hip length and is semi-fitting. The two-piece sleeve is in regulation coat style, and a rolling collar of brown velvet finished by a flat braid, affords stylish neck completion, but if preferred the collar may be of the material. Kersey, cheviot, serge and broadcloth are all suitable for reproduction. For a girl of fifteen years, two yards of 44-inch material will be required.

Misses' Coat No. 5690. Sizes for 15, 16 and 17 years.

Among the newest models are the dressy guimpe waists. This one is quite simple in construction and very modish. The material represented is light blue liberty satin over cream colored Cluny lace. The waist closes in the back, and is mounted on a fitted lining, although the lining may be omitted if preferred. The design would reproduce charmingly in taffeta, pongee, peau de sole and crepe de Chine in combination with any of the fashionable laces. For 36-inch bust measure $2\frac{1}{4}$ yards of material 27 inches wide will be required.

Ladies' Waist No. 5680. Sizes for 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure.

The guimpe and bodice waists that are so prominent a feature of the styles have created a demand for the plain guimpe on under blouse. The one here shown is of excellent shaping and may be made of all-over lace or embroidery, or of the most inexpensive lawn, trimmed with insertion and tucking. White or colored wash silks are also used with good effect. For 36-inch bust measure $2\frac{1}{4}$ yards of material 27 inches wide will be required.

Ladies' Guimpe No. 5687. Sizes for 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure.

An exceptionally smart design shows the loose graceful lines of the box-coat so generally becoming to youthful figures. The simplicity of the make-up is greatly in its favor, and it may be safely attempted by the home dressmaker. The pattern allows for long or medium hip length, and for full length or elbow sleeves either style finished by ornamental cuffs. The fronts lay in double breasted style and a broad collar gives smart neck completion. The design would develop well in tweed, broadcloth, cheviot, serge, linen and pique. For a girl of 16 years $2\frac{1}{4}$ yards of 50-inch material will be required.

Misses' Box Coat in long or medium hip length and with full length or shorter sleeves. No. 5758. Sizes for 15, 16 and 17 years.
